

Administrative and Constitutional Law

Content

The State is a fundamental actor in many of the business and non-business relationships of a society. The firm seeks to advise its clients so they can know their rights and can interact with the State and its entities in the most beneficial way possible.

We seek to support our clients in the following:

-  Negotiation and preparation of contracts with the State.
-  Analysis and preparation of legal opinions.
-  Counseling and representation in administrative and constitutional processes.
-  Preparation of constitutional suits.
-  Analysis and structuring of writs and their reply.
-  Counseling and representation in fiscal responsibility processes.
-  As members of permanent amiable settler panels in infrastructure contracts.

Questions

-  What to take into account when contracting with the State or submitting claims.
-  How to proceed when issue arise in contractual or extracontractual relations with the State or any of its agencies.
-  What to consider when a fundamental right has been violated and writ action for the protection of constitutional rights.